Downtown, located on Main Street in Bowling Green is preparing for its 20th anniversary.

Bar toasts anniversary

By WENDY SUTO
The BG News

On Feb. 9, 1979, two recent BGSU graduates, opened the doors to their new establishment, Uptown/Downtown. This Thursday they will be celebrating 20 years in business.

Jeff Hobbie, original/current owner, and Rick Kohler, original owner, said 92.5 KISS FM will be hosting the party 9 p.m.-12 a.m..

Hobbie said Uptown/Downtown will be giving away two spring break tickets to Jamaica. They will also be giving away special edition t-shirts, sweat-shirts and keychains for prizes.

Hobbie said Uptown/Downtown used to be a disco bar. It also was a 21 and over establishment.

According to Hobbie, songs like "I Will Survive" by Gloria Gaynor and "YMCA" by the Village People were favorites on the dance floor.

He said Uptown's dancing floor used to be filled with a multitude of flashing lights from the disco ball. He also said hanging ferns lined the edges of the room and the walls were plastered with artistic prints and protest posters. The waitresses dressed in leotards and disco skirts.

Today the bar has a whole new look.

"The sports bar was put into place in 1990," Hobbie said. "At the time, there were no sports bars in BG, and it took us awhile to open it so that we could serve alcohol."

All new bathrooms were reconstructed up and downstairs he said. Windows were updated and a green awning replaced the wooden Uptown sign in the early 1990's. The dance floor has also grown.

"As demand grew for more dance space, we kept knocking

Working on campus beneficial to students

By ROBERT RECKER
The BG News

Imagine it is your first year of college. The second semester started three weeks ago, and you have no money left in your checking account. Buying Christmas presents and partying have left you flat bankrupt.

You look at the phone, knowing that with just one call, someone could bail.

But no, you think. You're in college now. It's time to do what you put off for the last four months while you were ... adjusting to school.

It's time to get your first college job.

But the question now is whether to work on campus, or off?

Among students who lived in the residence halls, the consensus was that the convenience of an on-campus job was key.

Ryan McKean, a freshman computer science major, works as a cook's assistant at MacDonald Dining Hall.

"I don't have a car, and it's a lot easier to just walk downstairs to my job," McKean said.

Other students see on-campus employment as a solution to staying on top of classes and making money at the same time.

"You can work and go to class without worrying about traffic and parking," said Jason Robertson, a junior physical education major, who works at the Union.

Robertson also noted the ease of finding a schedule that works with your classes.

Others, such as Heidi Finley, a sophomore computer science, agreed. While considering the idea of working at the Garden Terrace, Finley said that administrators were very helpful.

"They want to help the students make money if they need it," Finley said.

Other students said safety is another plus for students working on-campus, especially when

USG considers voting by telephone

By JEFF ARNETT
The BG News

In an effort to improve voter turnout, the Undergraduate Student Government is looking into establishing a telephone voting system.

The proposed process would be similar to the Star-90 system currently used to register for classes. Students would have the option of casting their votes over telephone as opposed to voting at the Union Oval.

Jill Whyde, USG parliamentarian, said a major goal of the inquiry is to increase participation in USG. For instance, on a rainy day, some students might not want to go outside to vote, but she said they may want to vote over the phone.

"This is one of the ways USG is trying to reach out to the students and trying to make themselves more available to the students," Whyde said.

Also, a computerized voting system would also help USG focus more clearly on methods to improve participation.

"We could see if most of the voters are juniors or seniors and therefore USG could do things to improve turnout," she said.

Ann Marie Lancaster, chief information officer, said the system could easily be implemented using the University's current technology.

The computer system, Interactive Voice Response, that would handle the telephone election is already in use, Lancaster said.

"Technically, this is not difficult," Lancaster said.

Lancaster said the only problem could be in the election process itself.

"It depends how USG wants to handle the process," she said.

USG also has concerns with implementing the computerized voting system. According to Whyde it was originally considered for this spring election, but a variety of problems arose, including privacy concerns and fears of election fraud.

"We want it to be fully tested," she said. "We don't have ample time to test it [for this spring]. We'd really rather do it right than do it quickly."

She also added that USG is far from a consensus regarding the issue and many new concerns may arise before USG acts on the issue.

"There have been a lot of individuals who have expressed a lot of interest in it, but there have been a lot of individuals who've expressed doubt," she said.

She says she personally thinks it's a good idea, but she's not in a hurry to finish it.

"I'd be just as happy to get it done in two years with no kinks than by spring with a problem."

University professor dies

The BG News

A University faculty member died yesterday.

Douglas G. Ullman, psychology professor, collapsed at the University Student Recreation Center after completing a workout. SRC employees called 911 and administered CPR until the ambulance arrived. Ullman was pronounced dead upon arrival at Wood County Hospital. The cause of death is still unknown.

Ullman, 53, had worked at the University since 1972. He also served as director of the psychology services center.

La Niña affects weather

By CAROLYN STECKEL
The BG News

With the remains of the worst winter storm since 1978 melted, many are left wondering what is in store for the rest of the season.

Many thought that another major blizzard was going to occur on Jan. 31. Yet according to Robert Shiels, chief meteorologist for Channel 11 (WTOL) in Toledo, these were only rumors.

"The chances that we will get a storm like the one we experienced in January are pretty small," Shiels said.

However, Shiels said most of the weather is the result of La Nina, sister to the infamous El Nino.

"La Nina always follows after El Nino," Shiels said. "The waters become colder and therefore effects weather all around the globe."

As for the expectations of what is to come, Shiels said he never makes predictions.

"People always associate the winter weather with their personal experiences anyway," he said.

letter

I have a few questions to pose for Paul Khacherian who wrote the article "Feminist cry is worthless" in the Feb. 1 issue. After being prompted by a student to read your article, I felt compelled to write this response.

The first question is: how can you rant about something that admittedly you don't understand what they are all about? You discuss feminists, their issues and their work from a standpoint of ignorance. To be more informed of what feminists are working for, maybe you should begin by talking to different feminists or taking a course in Womens Studies or reading works by or about feminists. Many times people limit their information to the media or hearing it through second, third or fourth-hand sources, which can be one-sided and misrepresenting. If you need a couple of places to start, my office door is always open.

Second, why do you lump all feminists together? There are many kinds of feminists, with many different points of view, interests, standpoints, agendas and looks. With this variety of types and styles of feminisms the continuum is long with many subtleties and degrees.

Next, why are you working off stereotypes and false assumptions? For example, by stating "Just like environmentalists are often seen by some as giving the whole environmental movement a bad rap, feminists are giving females a bad rap," there are several fallacies or contradictions in your argument. You should be careful when attaching one to the many—it's not a good idea to generalize from a few people to a group. And, you liken the environmentalists to the environmental movement, but you compare feminists to all women instead of to the feminist movement—why?

Third, when someone attaches a person or group with a generalized set of assumptions about their personalities, actions or intentions, we build stereotypes and this can inhibit our understanding and limit our ability to interact.

Fourth, why are you discussing only one issue as if it is the entire scope of all feminists? Yes, a goal of many is equality and opportunity, but that is only scratching the surface of a much richer effort. The goal of many feminists is to give voice to those who have been previously ignored, silenced or marginalized. We work on many issues to encourage movement, gain freedom and give awareness, which will not only help women in their internal and external conflicts but also help society (women and men) become more well rounded and balanced. My goal as a feminist and as a teacher is to help anyone become more self-aware, more self-assured and more integrated in the world on her or his own.

Feminists and feminisms have done many things for society by helping women gain their rights, understand their potentials and celebrate their uniquenesses—and that is only the beginning of what has been accomplished. If you choose to learn more about us you may become more aware of yourself. I wish you luck on your journey—it's an incredible ride.

THE MARLBORO MAN

Throughout the years, many business companies have used spokesmen in their ads to help sell their products. The Marlboro man is one of the most recognizable spokesmen around and has helped out greatly in the success of Marlboro. However, there have been many other spokesmen for other companies that were ineffective or just did not catch on. Here are some of the spokespeople that you might have never seen or forgot about.

Commuters need home

I'm a commuter. I wake up around 6:30 a.m.; my arrival time in BG is usually between 7:30 a.m. and 7:45 a.m. Then I go and spend a few hours sleeping (or waking up) at the Off-Campus Student Center (OCSC) until I have to go to class.

The OCSC is in the basement of Mosely, for those of you who are unfamiliar with it. I could hardly believe that a fellow commuter and friend of mine had no idea that it even existed. It's a wonderful place. I can catch up on my never-ending reading assignments (early in the morning or in the evening, at least), check my e-mail, and hang out with friends (and if time allows, I can usually slide into a game of euchre or hearts).

They called this place "our home away from home" during my freshman orientation, and while I laughed at the slogan then, I've come to realize that it's very true. There aren't many other places on campus where I would feel comfortable just collapsing on a couch for a few hours between classes. I love that place. I love it enough that I somehow got elected as publicity chair of the Off-Campus Connection (OCC), which is the group that plans parties and whatnot for the OCSC.

But here's the thing. The University is going to be moving the OCSC into the New Union, whenever that goes up. The OCC was concerned about losing certain advantages of having the OCSC where it is, so we asked some people to come explain what was being planned for us. Our biggest concern was probably the loss of space.

Jena Lohrbach

Right now we have our own computer lab, our own bathrooms, a lounge and study lounge. We have a bunch of lockers (most of which are taken), a little room for vending machines, microwaves and a sink to wash our dishes. In the New Union, we were told we'll have lockers outside the room reserved for us, we'll be upstairs from the food court, bathrooms will be shared by the rest of everyone on the floor who's passing through, and there's a fairly large room somewhere in the plans that's been declared a study lounge for all.

Right now, commuters have approximately 4,300 square feet of space in the OCSC. The area allotted us in the New Union is 1,500 square feet.

In a conversation I was having with Barb Limes, the director of the OCSC, we were talking about how crowded the OCSC has gotten in the few years since I started school. Employees take count of how many people are in the OCSC every hour, and last semester the count was up 32.5 percent from the fall of 1997, and up 65.5 percent from fall of 1996 semester.

The gentlemen who have talked to us about the New Union plans have been wonderful in trying to alleviate our fears about what's going to happen to "our place," and although I was satisfied for a while, the fears are coming back to haunt me.

All those people, and if the student population keeps increasing, we're going to have to accommodate more students, and 1,500 square feet just will not suffice. Even with all the lounges that the commuters will have to use as "overflows," it just won't be the same. Splitting up the resources (like our computer lab) that people like Barb have been trying so hard to obtain for us since the OCSC was developed will take away our little "community" — our home.

Other students have dorms to go home to, but many of the commuters don't have that option. We are stuck on campus from the time we get there until the end of our last class, and we need a place to go. If we are going to move into the New Union, then let us rejoice that we won't have cockroaches crawling across the floor while we eat breakfast.

But don't try to crowd us into one little room and expect us to expand into the "on-campus overflows" like we do in parking. We don't have enough room as it is. I may not be here in ten years, but the commuters will. And the last thing they will want or need is to feel like they've been shut out of a community that once existed for them, because once upon a time someone cared that the commuters needed a place on campus to call home.

Jena is one of many commuters who doesn't have e-mail at home, but checks it religiously when she's here. Send your feedback and other thoughts to jlohrb@bgnet.bgsu.edu

America no different from other countries

America's global influence is incredible. Culture seems to be our biggest export. People go to our movies, listen to our music and wear our jeans. In a recent survey, it showed that 60 percent of Europeans would vacation in the States.

So, you think if Europeans import American goods, wear American jeans and want to spend their vacation in the U.S.A., they must like Americans because our logic tells us that A + B = C. But the truth is, Americans are not well-liked. My Canadian friend tells me Americans sew a Canadian patch on their backpacks to up their quality points among Europeans.

What do they say about us?

"Americans are egocentric, and in the movies, they always save the world."

When was the last time a big world news story took precedence over the soap opera of our president's sex life? If Europeans are watching our films instead of their own, why would we buy their films? If we did, we would be supporting other cultures, and we would not want to look outward now would we?

"Americans are materialistic." Yeah, we like stuff. But who doesn't?

Amanda Fier

U-Wire
Guest
Columnist

"And fat." Our health organizations tell us the same thing.

"Americans are not genuine. They don't mean what they say." My Swedish friend's father told her to be careful with us Americans because we will say something and not really mean it.

"American government sticks its nose into the business of other countries."

Phillippe Dumartheray's Jan. 6 column in the 24 Heures newspaper said Americans are all about protecting their interests. The title of this editorial was, "If Saddam didn't exist, America would have invented him."

We are talking about politicians, not your average American citizens.

"Americans are ignorant, especially when it comes to geography." A New Yorker living on the Canadian border asked my friend, who was living one kilometer on the other side of the line, "What is the weather like there?"

I have to say, many Europeans know where Iowa is and do not insist that it is Idaho. I agree Americans need to get out the map more often.

People have made it clear why America sucks, even if they haven't been there, and they have told me why they don't like Americans, even if they still plan on going there. Sigh.

Some Americans may very well be all that Europeans say they are, but I am glad to be an American because I understand all the song lyrics, and I can get Levi's much cheaper at home. I also feel America is quite open to the European lifestyle and we are less occupied with the smell of Europeans and their love of mopeds than Europeans are with American goings-on.

Maybe it is because we are more accepting, or maybe it's because we don't know enough to criticize effectively. I don't know.

At the end of a lunchtime discussion with Irish, American, English, Canadian and Swedish people about "Why we hate America," I asked what it was they did like about the States. An Irish fellow admitted that America was cool because "you can get free refills."

He also mentioned the fact you can walk down to the grocery store in pajamas without getting hassled and find yourself a friendly clerk who asks how you're doing. This Irishman, who is a geography major, conceded that perhaps Americans are bad with geography because of the immense size of the States and our proximity to other continents. (Still, it is no excuse.) The Swede said she finds Americans easy to talk to and to get along with.

Finally, the Irishwoman said, "I guess it is like every other country; you have your ignorant people, and you have your nice people."

And she is right. It's the yin and the yang philosophy: In everything that is good, there is a little bit of evil. And in all that is evil, there exists a little bit of good. The exceptions cannot exist without the stereotypes.

And the stereotypes cannot exist without the exceptions. In the end, we are all unique.

Amanda Fier is a guest columnist from Iowa State University brought to BGSU via U-Wire.

WATCH OUT!

ARE YOU A MAN-HATER???

Women are coming online in increasing numbers, and there's been a corresponding rise in sites that purport to address "women's issues." The gender and racial makeup of the Internet is slowly becoming more diverse and hopefully more interesting as we chip away at the pale maleness that has characterized cyberspace for the past decade. The more opinions, the better the dialogue.

But many of these sites created by and marketed towards women tend to lack a certain discursive edge. We see more and more of the same old glossy magazine-style stuff. Fashion. Media. Popular Culture. Relationship advice. While this may say more about the demographics (can you say disposable income?) of people using and creating content for the Web, I think there's another important reason: Women are afraid of appearing humorless.

We've all heard the jokes. Q: How do you offend a feminist? A:

That's not funny. There's a very persistent metaphor floating around in our cultural consciousness: women who aren't afraid to speak out against oppression, who know what they want and won't take less than they deserve are bitter, ugly, no-sex-havin', friendless freaks. In short, man-haters.

For a long time, I thought this stereotype was kind of quaint, much like children's fears about monsters in the closet. I've always felt that if anyone actually said this kind of trite s--- to me, I could just pat them on the head and turn on a nightlight, chuckle, and know that they'd grow out of it.

I can say quite easily that I hate patriarchy.

But do I hate men? Hell, no.

But I'm starting to realize that this misconception actually does affect women's lives. For every woman out there who actively speaks out against injustice and bigotry, there are dozens who have bitten their tongues and mustered a forced laugh at a sexist joke around the water cooler.

And the fact that many women are afraid to speak their opinions aggressively is mirrored in women's content on the Web.

There is a difference between attacking an oppressive system of power and attacking a person. I can say quite easily that I hate patriarchy. But do I hate men? Hell, no.

And you know what, guys? When I'm talking about prejudice and how it has affected my life, I'm not attacking you. In fact, it's pretty arrogant of you to assume that, and that presumption probably does a lot to prove whatever point I'm trying to make about how male/female power systems work. You, personally, are not at the center of my dialectical universe.

There is a monster in the closet. But it's not some butch, hairy-legged feminist avenger. It is people's inability to let go of their utterly bizarre cultural preconceptions and actually listen to what other people are saying.

Example: Toby resounded his unlightened view about women and vowed to never classify himself as a misogynist again; rather, he would take up the feminist cause and volunteer at NOW.

Misogynist comes from the Greek "misin," meaning to hate, and "gyn," which means women. Interestingly, there exists no word which expresses the same for men: the closest is "misandrophobia," which denotes a hatred of all people, not just males.

TOBACCO RULING

Florida court overturns smoker death case

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — A Florida appeals court has overturned a landmark $1 million award to the family of a smoker who died of lung cancer.

In an unsigned one-paragraph order, the appellate court on Friday vacated the verdict and ordered the case transferred to either Palm Beach County or Broward County in south Florida.

In June, a Jacksonville jury ordered Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. to pay the family of Roland Maddox $1 million.

Two months later, the 1st District Court of Appeal in Tallahassee ruled on a pretrial motion that the trial should be held in south Florida. The appellate court apparently didn't realize that the case had gone to trial and been won by Maddox's family.

In October, a trial judge in Jacksonville refused to overturn the verdict but transferred the case to a Palm Beach County court for any further legal issues. Brown & Williamson appealed that decision to the appeals court.

An attorney for the tobacco company said he believed there were numerous errors in the original trial.

"It is now clear that the trial should never have occurred in Jacksonville," Thomas Riley said in a statement released by Brown & Williamson. He predicted that court decisions since then would ensure a fair trial "if this suit is ever retried."

Post Office holding vote on 1980's stamps

WASHINGTON — It's time to crank your memory back to the 1980s and decide what were the most important events of that recent decade.

The post office is once again inviting the public to vote on 15 stamps to represent the decade. Already stamps of the 1950s, '60s and '70s have been chosen by public voting.

Balloting on the 1980s stamps began Monday and lasts until the end of February. Forms are available in post offices and via the Internet at <http://stampvote.msn.com>.

The stamps will be released next year.

"Last year, the public cast millions of votes to let us know what they wanted to see on postage stamps honoring the 1950s, 1960s and 1970s," said Postmaster General William Henderson.

"Now is their chance to immortalize the 1980s, a decade marked as much by increasing awareness of the AIDS epidemic as it was by the dramatic removal of the Berlin Wall, our national obsession with the personal computer and our children's love for the Cabbage Patch Kids."

Smoke billows from a generating plant at the Ford Motor Co.'s River Rouge plant in Dearborn, Mich.

Ford plant explosion kills 1, injuries many

The Associated Press

DEARBORN, Mich. — An explosion and fire Monday at a power station for a huge Ford Motor Co. plant killed one worker and injured several others as crews battled the blaze for hours. "This is the worst day of my life," Chairman William Clay Ford Jr. said.

Three workers were unaccounted for, the company said.

Fire broke out about 1 p.m. at the coal-fired plant at Ford's huge River Rouge Complex.

The plant produces electricity for the entire complex. It generates enough power to serve a city the size of Boston, Ford spokesman Michael Vaughn said.

Hours after the fire began, thick smoke and flames were still visible from the building.

"It's awful," Ford said. "Everyone who works at Ford is an extended member of the family. This is the worst day of my life."

Jerry Sullivan, president of the United Auto Workers Local 600, said he saw a number of severely injured people when he went to the scene.

"I haven't seen something like that since my days in Vietnam," he said.

Oakwood Hospital treated 11 patients from the fire and transferred 10 others elsewhere because of the severity of their burns, said Dr. Gary Christopher, director of emergency services at Oakwood.

Of those treated at Oakwood, six to eight had severe burns over 60 percent to 80 percent of their bodies.

"Several of these gentlemen were thrown by the blast and suffered various head injuries," Christopher said.

Garden City Hospital received one patient, public relations director Terry Carroll said. University of Michigan Hospital spokeswoman Carol Craig said it was expecting five patients, some from Oakwood, for its burn unit.

The cause of the fire was being investigated.

A spokeswoman for Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. said gas was shut off at the complex, a standard procedure, and there was no evidence the explosion was gas-related.

The Michigan Department of Consumer and Industry Services also sent two inspectors to the site, spokeswoman Maura Campbell said.

Hourly workers on duty at the complex were sent home while second shift workers were told not to report to work. About 4,000 employees were there at the time, said Ford spokesman Jim Vella.

The 1,100-acre Rouge facility was once the world's largest auto plant. Henry Ford built the plant in 1918 because he dreamed of building a car from start to finish in one location.

Jordan prepares for change in monarchy

The Associated Press

BAQAA CAMP, Jordan— Advertisements for Coke and Pepsi, shops selling music and videos, a bank, a doctor's clinic, even a portrait of King Hussein mark the entrance along rolling hills to Baqaa, Jordan's largest Palestinian refugee camp.

A camp in name; a city in reality.

Baqaa's 100,000 people are part of the sad tapestry stitched by the exodus of Palestinians in two wars with Israel. For 50 years, the Palestinian refugees' presence has proved explosive in Jordan, at times even threatening the very survival of the Hashemite kingdom.

The transformation of Baqaa from a warren of muddy streets, tents and cinderblock huts into a city as bustling as any in the country speaks to the changing role of Jordan's refugees.

Today, they are as Jordanian as they are Palestinian, giving their tacit backing as the monarchy undergoes its biggest change in a generation with the ailing king's decision last week to depose his brother, Hassan, in favor of his son, Abdullah, as heir.

"You're speaking about 30 years that we've been here. We have Jordanian passports, we live on Jordanian land and we work in the government. We live here, temporarily, but we are here now," said Awni Shatarat, who left the West Bank town of Hebron in 1967.

"We can live like a ghetto or we can be part of society," he said at his toy shop on the camp's crowded main street.

Times were once much more troubled.

Palestinians make up roughly two-thirds of Jordan's 3.8 million people. Some 1.5 million remain refugees, many out of choice or economic hardship, and their loyalty was often questioned by Jordan's royal family, whose roots are in western Saudi Arabia.

King Hussein's grandfather, King Abdullah, was killed at the Al Aqsa mosque in Jerusalem by a Palestinian angered by Jordan's annexation of the West Bank in 1950. A bullet aimed at Hussein bounced off a medal pinned to his chest.

In 1970, civil war erupted between the king's Bedouin army and Palestinians, who were running a virtual state within a state in Jordan. Palestinians still remember it as "Black September."

The fighting cost thousands of lives and Jordanian artillery reduced some refugee camps to rubble.

Shatarat, then 7, remembers the staccato bursts of machine guns, the fighters clad in black running through the camp, mothers crying when their sons went to battle.

"We, both the Jordanians and the Palestinians, have tried to forget that black page," he said.

Although Palestinians have been greeted more warmly in Jordan than other Arab states, they are still underrepresented in the military and government, where they occupy only four out of 23 portfolios. The 80-member Parliament remains dominated by the Bedouin tribesmen who have long served as a pillar of the monarchy's support.

In a newly liberalized economy, the Palestinians exercise growing power, particularly in banks, hotels, industry and trade — their wealth is on display in Amman suburbs like Rabyeh and Abdoun, where satellite dishes perch atop villas.

Even inhabitants of camps like Baqaa take pride in the sentiment shared by Palestinians across the Arab world that they helped build the countries in which they live. Without them, they say, Jordan, a country bereft of resources, would be a desert backwater.

"If you pull out your teeth, then you can't eat," said Abdel-Qadir Abu Rayal, a 47-year-old shopkeeper in Baqaa, which sprawls along a valley on the outskirts of Amman.

The 11 refugee camps in Jordan remain a wild card.

The Palestinians living there, almost without exception, insist they want to return to their villages and towns in historic Palestine — an issue to be decided in Israeli-Palestinian talks.

And the role Jordan will play in the so-called final-status negotiations is unclear. Even today, it remains a sensitive issue for Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, who competed with King Hussein in the 1960s and 1970s to speak on Palestinians' behalf.

Many Palestinians see a more sympathetic figure in Prince Abdullah than in Prince Hassan. Some even cite his Palestinian wife, Princess Rania, whose family immigrated to Kuwait from the West Bank town of Tulkarem.

In the meantime their loyalty seems assured.

In the market of Baqaa, one Palestinian was asked who he would fight for in a war between Jordan and another Arab country.

"Between Arabs and Muslims, I believe in a peaceful solution," said Mahmoud Mohammed, 25, whose family fled in 1967.

But if there was a war?

"Well," he said, "I'm Jordanian, of course."

Yeltsin, ill, spends birthday in seclusion

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Boris Yeltsin celebrated his 68th birthday at a secluded government sanitarium Monday, visited by just a few dignitaries and largely ignored by the opposition, ordinary Russians and the press.

The ailing president's wife, Naina, said she was planning to cook Yeltsin's favorite treats — cabbage pie and walnut cakes — for his birthday. But because of Yeltsin's stomach ulcer, they would likely be eaten by other members of the family, Naina said, according to the ITAR-Tass news agency.

At the Barvikha sanitarium, Yeltsin was visited by the head of the Russian Orthodox Church, Patriarch Alexy II, Prime Minister Yevgeny Primakov and presidential chief of staff Nikolai Bordyuzha.

Television footage showed Yeltsin, clad in a gray pullover, smiling but moving slowly as he kissed longtime ally Alexy II and joined his guests in a toast with what appeared to be champagne.

Yeltsin has been abandoned by many other of his former allies, who have recently started calling for his resignation, saying that his frequent illnesses have eroded his ability to govern.

One such former ally, Moscow Mayor Yuri Luzhkov, said he sent birthday greetings to the president "as a matter of business and personal ethics," the Interfax news agency reported.

Yeltsin gave himself a birthday present of sorts, by checking out over the weekend from a government hospital where he had been treated for the ulcer, and moving to the sanitarium.

"But from others, Boris Nikolayevich won't hear that many sincere greetings," the daily Moskovsky Komsomolets remarked.

"Most of Yeltsin's allies who just recently were crowding around his throne have fled to other ships. And most ordinary citizens have by now completely forgotten when they had said anything good about the head of state."

Yeltsin has been a part-time president for months because of a string of illnesses that include respiratory infections, pneumonia and prolonged heart trouble.

living on campus.

Though there are definite advantages to University jobs, campus workers and off-campus workers said working on campus has its disadvantages.

Heather Johnson, a senior art therapy major, used to work in the Union set-up crew, but is now employed at The Shed. When it comes to job satisfaction, she gives the nod to the off-campus job.

"I like a bigger variety of people other than just college students," Johnson said, referring to her customers. "I also think it's a little more laid-back here. It seems like you have to do a lot of busy work (on-campus)."

Another student experienced with both on and off-campus work said that the money is better outside of the University.

Subway cashier LaKeisha Alexander, a sophomore marketing and international business major, said her job pays more and she gets more hours.

"I worked in dining services and didn't like it because I was only getting about nine hours a week," Alexander said.

Some on-campus student workers find it hard to work under the supervisors, many of whom are students themselves.

"Sometimes it is hard to reprimand them and tell them what to do," said Anne Deitrick, a student supervisor at Towers Restaurant. "But I have to take the initiative and show them that I'm above them because if they don't do it right, I am the one who will be getting in trouble."

Robertson, who is a student supervisor at the Pizza Outlet, also said that supervisors are not trained very well in handling other students.

"You're their peers, so they have a hard time listening to you," Robertson said.

From her position, Towers' food service worker Karen Piotrowski can oversee the interactions between students and supervisors. She said that they all get along for the most part.

"Our supervisors hold general worker spots too, so that eases the tension," Piotrowski said.

Despite the tangles involved with college jobs — on and off campus — students are driven to seek out employment thanks to one thing: the dollar.

"My job at GT is just for a little extra spending money," Carey Jones, a sophomore elementary education major, said. "I need it because my parents don't send me any."

predictions is "The Old Farmer's Almanac." One prediction was that Jan. 13, 1999, would be the coldest day of the year. Ironically, the University cancelled its evening classes that day.

Another occurrence which the almanac said will effect the weather is two full moons in one month, which will occur in January and March of this year. According to the almanac, two full Moons in a calendar month bring on floods.

Glen Frey, meteorologist and assistant professor in the geography department, said the fluctuation in weather patterns from cold to warm weather are normal.

"The weather depends on the pattern of the jet stream. If it is flowing west to east, then we will experience more mild weather," Frey said.

He said if the jet stream travels in a bigger loop, for example down to Texas and back up, then the stormier the weather will be.

As for his predictions on another major storm, Frey said though it is not likely, the city of Bowling Green has been known to get storms in the first week of February.

"Every couple of days there is a storm somewhere, whether it has a lot of moisture or not," he said.

Frey said someone will get another major storm before the end of the winter.

"Will Bowling Green be in it? Maybe it will, maybe it won't."

walls off," Hobbie said. "Eventually we made the entire room a dance floor."

Hobbie said he enjoys updating and changing the overall atmosphere of the bar every couple of years.

"Sometimes I get bored with it," Hobbie said. "I like doing something different and I think the customers like the changes too."

Kristen Medves, a resident of BG, has been working at the bar in the deli for the past year. She likes the atmosphere and the people working there.

"There are always different kinds of people in here," Medves said. "The crab races are interesting."

Jenny Gardner, a junior IPC major, also likes the crab races. She has seen the races often.

"The crab races offer a little variety in BG," she said. "No other bar in BG is as alternative as Uptown/Downtown."

Kevin Bahnsen, an Uptown/Downtown bartender, said he enjoys working with people.

"I get along great with my boss," Bahnsen said. "I like meeting a variety of people everyday, from friendly, fun-loving college people to town drunks."

Another University student, Angela Pilewsk, a junior psychology major, said the atmosphere at the bar has changed since her freshman year.

"They have put more money towards it by putting in new lighting," Pilewsk said. "It is an alternative to the mainstream bar scene."

Nichols asks court to reverse conviction

The Associated Press

DENVER — Terry Nichols' conviction in the Oklahoma City bombing should be overturned because a federal judge refused to allow an FBI whistleblower to testify, his attorney argued Monday.

Nichols also asked for a reduced sentence, contending the judge used the wrong guidelines to impose a life term.

In a small courtroom crowded with bombing victims and relatives, prosecutor Sean Connelly countered by arguing that Nichols got a fair trial and a fair sentence.

"He committed this nation's most deadly conspiracy. There was nothing unfair about that sentence," Connelly told a three-judge panel at the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Michael Tigar, Nichols' lawyer, said U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch used guidelines for the charge of murder even though Nichols was convicted of the lesser charge of involuntary manslaughter, along with conspiracy.

In the absence of a reversal, Tigar asked the panel "to respect the jury's verdict" and reduce Nichols' sentence of life without parole.

"I would really rather be doing something else. I'll be glad when it's all over."

Roy Sells

who lost his wife, Lee, in the bombing

Nichols was sentenced last year and ordered to pay $14.5 million in restitution. Timothy McVeigh was convicted of murder and conspiracy and sentenced to die for the April 1995 bombing, which killed 168 people. McVeigh is appealing his conviction and sentence to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Judge Bobby Baldock asked Tigar whether it mattered which sentencing guideline was used, for involuntary manslaughter or murder.

"If death results, they are just as dead as if it was first-degree murder," Baldock told Tigar.

In asking for the conviction to be overturned, Tigar challenged Matsch's decision to deny FBI whistleblower Frederick Whitehurst an opportunity to testify about fertilizer crystals found on the truck used in the bombing.

Tigar told the appeals court Whitehurst was prepared to offer new research that brought into question prosecutors' claims that fertilizer crystals found on truck pieces could have survived a night in the rain.

Tigar said Whitehurst was threatened with losing his job if he continued to help Nichols' attorneys. Connelly said Whitehurst was not threatened and in fact offered to testify for Nichols.

During the trial, prosecutors said Nichols joined with McVeigh in helping get bomb materials — including two tons of ammonium nitrate — burglarizing an explosives quarry, robbing a firearms collector and renting storage sheds.

Lawyers expect a ruling within about three months.

Roy Sells, who lost his wife, Lee, in the bombing, said he has attended every court hearing since.

"I would really rather be doing something else. I'll be glad when it's all over," he said. "On the last day of McVeigh's life, I'll be there, too. Then, I think I can get this behind me."

Lewinsky questioned by prosecutors

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — In their first face-to-face meeting, White House lawyers offered Monica Lewinsky an apology Monday "on behalf of the president" for the difficulties the impeachment investigation has caused her. They turned down the chance to ask any questions during sworn testimony forced by House prosecutors.

The deposition of the former White House intern took place behind closed doors in the Mayflower Hotel's presidential suite, but was videotaped for senators weighing the impeachment charges.

Rep. Ed Bryant, R-Tenn., spent about four hours posing questions on behalf of the House prosecution team that fought to persuade the Senate to summon Ms. Lewinsky. Her testimony closely tracked her earlier account to a federal grand jury, according to sources familiar with the testimony who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The sources were not associated with the House prosecution team and worked outside the White House. Ms. Lewinsky's lawyers declined comment.

By not questioning Ms. Lewinsky, the Clinton lawyers passed up an opportunity to challenge her statements.

One source said Ms. Lewinsky reaffirmed that:

—When she asked Clinton what to do about subpoenaed gifts from him on Dec. 28, 1997, his response was something like "let me think about it."

White House lawyers had argued to the Senate that on other occasions, Ms. Lewinsky said Clinton had no reaction.

—In a middle-of-the-night conversation on Dec. 17, 1997, Clinton told her she was on the witness list in Paula Jones' sexual harassment lawsuit, suggested she could file an affidavit and mentioned their previously arranged cover stories to explain why she was coming to see the president. Ms. Lewinsky filed a false affidavit denying an affair.

Bryant would not discuss the substance of the questioning, which lasted far less than the eight hours set aside by the Senate, but he said he "felt it was a productive session."

On several occasions, Ms. Lewinsky asked Bryant to be more specific in his questions, several sources said. Six senators, three Republicans and three Democrats, sat in on the session, with two at a time acting as referees.

The videotape was to be made available to the rest of the Senate beginning at 8 a.m. EST Tuesday.

Presidential friend Vernon Jordan will be questioned on Tuesday and White House aide Sidney Blumenthal on Wednesday in depositions in a private room at the Capitol.

At one point in Monday's session, private presidential attorney Nicole Seligman read a statement that apologized to Ms. Lewinsky "on behalf of the president for all the trouble the investigation and impeachment trial had caused her," one of the sources said.

Seligman and the two other Clinton attorneys who attended the session posed no questions of the former intern, according to several sources.

The president's team had planned not to ask questions if the lawyers felt the prosecutors had broken no new ground, said several Democratic sources familiar with the preparations.

Away from the session, presidential lawyers were more aggressive, filing a new complaint with a federal judge against Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr in connection with a weekend story in The New York Times that reported Starr had concluded a grand jury could indict Clinton before he left office.

David Kendall, a private lawyer representing Clinton, said he was asking a federal court to require Starr to show why he and his staff "should not be held in contempt for improper violations of grand jury secrecy."

Starr said in a statement that he was "deeply troubled" by the news story and announced he was "launching an internal investigation to determine whether anyone in this office improperly disclosed the information to the Times."

After senators view the tape — available for their viewing at four Capitol sites — excerpts could end up being shown as part of the trial, which will resume Thursday. Or senators could vote to bring Ms. Lewinsky to the floor for live testimony about her relationship with Clinton and attempts to conceal it, a less likely development.

Ms. Lewinsky's recollection of Clinton's actions and words are crucial to the Senate's consideration of several matters: her affidavit in the Paula Jones civil lawsuit falsely denying a sexual affair with Clinton, the job search after she appeared on the Jones witness list and the retrieval of presidential gifts by Clinton's secretary.

Sources familiar with Bryant's questions said he covered a wide range of issues that have been of interest to House prosecutors, including the former intern's conversations with the president around the time she was emerging as a witness in the Jones case.

Ms. Lewinsky answered calmly, at times clarifying the dates of specific conversations and events but tracking her grand jury testimony closely, those sources said.

The House team promised in advance to shun intimate questions about the sexual affair.

Outside the Mayflower Hotel, Lewinsky lawyer Plato Cacheris declined to comment on any aspect of the questioning. Asked whether she was being compelled to remain in Washington, he replied, "Nope."

The chances were slim for any bombshells at Monday's session since Ms. Lewinsky would risk her immunity deal with Starr by saying anything that was inconsistent with her grand jury testimony.

If senators decide that viewing the videotapes provides all the information they need, they can proceed to closing arguments in the perjury and obstruction case and meet the goal of ending the trial by Friday, Feb. 12, or sooner.

In previous votes on procedural matters, Democrats have demonstrated more than enough strength to block conviction and removal of the president by the required two-thirds vote.

Slave's daughter, author dies at 109

Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — Sadie Delany, a slave's daughter who overcame challenges of race, gender and age and became a best-selling author at age 104, came home Monday to be buried near her sister and writing partner.

About 275 people filled a small stone chapel Monday to celebrate the life of Sarah L. "Sadie" Delany. She and her sister, Dr. Annie Elizabeth "Bessie" Delany, were centenarian authors who wrote "Having Our Say: The Delany Sisters' First 100 Years" with journalist Amy Hill Hearth.

The 1993 book, which chronicled what life was like for blacks before the civil rights movement, became a top seller, inspired a Broadway play and has been used as a college text.

Ms. Delany, 109, died last week at her home in Mount Vernon, N.Y., a New York City suburb.

Ms. Delany's great-grand niece told mourners Monday that like so many strangers, she came to know a side of her relative by reading the book. Until then, Brandi Delany said, she thought Aunt Sadie was just a retired home economics teacher, a "sweet aunt who acted far younger than her age."

Instead, the book showed that her Aunt Sadie was a pioneer, far ahead of her time.

"I'm happy to know that Aunt Sadie has gone to be reunited with her father, mother and nine brothers and sisters," Brandi Delany said.

Nephew Henry B. Delany V of Detroit said Ms. Delany was generous in what counted: "Time, love and kindness. She gave a lot of those."

"Having Our Say" relates the sisters' observations of a century of black American history as they lived it, first as young girls in the South, later as career women in New York's Harlem.

There were matter-of-fact references to the degradation the sisters witnessed: the post-slavery years, lynchings, "Jim Crow" segregation laws. Bessie was nearly lynched once, as a young woman, after a run-in with a white person at a railroad station.

There were also triumphs — their pride in the 1960s civil rights movement and their success in the working world when most women stayed home.

"I never let prejudice stop me from what I wanted to do in this life," Sadie once said.

The sisters, who described themselves as "best friends from day one," and their eight brothers and sisters grew up on the campus of St. Augustine's College, where Monday's funeral took place.

Their father, freed from slavery as a child, became a vice principal of the school. All 10 of his children went on to attend college.

The sisters, neither of whom ever married, moved to New York after they graduated from St. Augustine's. Sadie Delany earned a master's degree in education from Columbia University and became the first black domestic-science teacher in New York City's public schools. Bessie Delany became a dentist.

After their first success as authors, the women followed with "The Delany Sisters' Book of Everyday Wisdom." Then after her sister's death, Sadie Delany wrote a third book: "On My Own at 107: Reflections on Life Without Bessie."

At the burial, the Rev. Thomas Logan Jr. said he had asked someone to show him where on campus Ms. Delany was born.

He said he thought it was appropriate "that we would take soil from the land where her house was built" and place it on her casket, which he did as he chanted "earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust."

Women's track takes third at Kent

By MATT STEINER
The BG News

The Falcon women's indoor track and field team finished third in a field of five teams at the Doug Raymond Invitational Saturday.

The host school Kent won the meet with a total of 192 points. Penn State finished in the runner-up position with 187. Next came BG, West Virginia and Toledo, 133, 127, 77 respectively.

In preparation for the indoor Mid-American Conference championships, BG mixed up the lineup a little and rested some of their athletes.

All-American long and triple jumper Huina Han sat out another meet with an injured knee. Becca Barnett who competes in multiple events for BG did not compete due to a bout with the flu. Coach Steve Price rested sprinter Kelly Mansell for the second straight week. Mansell has soar shins.

"Despite the fact that we didn't win the meet, under the circumstances we fared pretty well," Price said. "I feel very good about our individual performances. It appears that the MAC title will go down to us and Kent State. Statistics show us to be pretty even right now."

Hanane Sabri led the way for the Falcons for the third straight week. Although she fell short of setting any records Saturday, Sabri took first place in the mile run (4:55.01) and the 3,000 meter run (10:08.54). She also ran the anchor leg on the 4x400-meter relay team which finished second to Kent.

Lisa Keegan took second place in the 20-pound weight throw for the Falcons. More importantly, Keegan broke the BG school record with a throw of 54 feet 6 3/4 inches.

"I broke the record by six inches," Keegan said. "I would have liked to have thrown it farther, but, I guess it will do."

Keegan also managed fifth place in the shot-put (43 feet 5 3/4 inches).

Coming off a record setting performance last week at the Saginaw Valley Invitational, Stephanie Heldt continued with a strong performance. She won the high jump with a jump of 5 feet 8 inches. Jodi Rafferty also did well in the high jump taking third place for BG.

The other Falcon to win an event was Laura Deneau in the 5,000-meter run. Deneau, from Warren, Mich., won in a time of 17:52.60.

Four other BG athletes set personal bests at the DRI.

Tracy Hill took third in the 400-meter run with a time of 57.19 seconds. Libby Mitchell placed second in the 800 (2:14.79) behind only Kecia Herod of West Virginia. Both Mitchell and Hill set indoor personal bests.

Lori Williams threw for her personal best, indoors or outdoors, with a toss of 50 feet 8 3/4 inches in the 20-pound throw. Angie Michael, finishing fourth in the mile (5:07.37), also had a personal record.

One other notable for the Falcons was Christine Thompson. She grabbed second in the mile (5:01.33). Thompson also joined Mitchell, Hill and Sabri in the 4x400 relay.

At even strength, Bowling Green was able to handle Lake Superior. It was special teams that gave them problems.

The Falcons took the seven and a half hour trip up to Sault Ste. Marie, Mi. and came away with only two of four points. BG beat Lake Superior 3-2 Friday and lost to them in overtime 4-3 on Saturday.

Bowling Green is now 12-12-3 overall and 8-10-3 in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association. Lake Superior is 5-13-2 in league play.

"Our special teams cost us points on the weekend," BG coach Buddy Powers said. "We were poor killing penalties and we were poor on the power-play."

Out of the Lakers' six goals only two of them were at even strength. LSSU clicked on 4-10 chances with the man advantage.

At the same time, the Falcons only scored once on their nine powerplays.

"As a whole, I don't think that the team was really mentally prepared," BG forward Craig Desjarlais said. "I think we played down to their level for the second time this year."

Friday's game see-sawed back and forth throughout the third period, but Bowling Green had the last goal.

Freshman center Greg Day scored with a couple minutes remaining in the first period to give the Falcons an early lead.

After BG survived a second period in which they were outshot 12-4, the scoring opened up in the third period.

With Adam Edinger in the penalty box, LSSU's Chris Thompson tied the game.

Less than 30 seconds later Dan Price scored with assists to Edinger and Mike Jones.

Lake Superior's Jeremy Bachusz evened the game for the second time late in the period before Chris Bonvie scored the game-winning goal.

BG fell behind early Saturday. The Lakers scored two goals in the first period and another late in the second.

BG rallied in the third period. Edinger started the Falcons off at the 2:18 mark. Seconds later, Desjarlais scored the first of his two goals. The other came at the 8:02 mark to tie the game.

"They changed up the lines and put me on a line with Day and Hewson," Desjarlais said of his second goal. "It was good work by the whole line. (Day) had a good shot on net, I scored the rebound and Hewson made a good pass."

As regulation ended, Mike Jones received a controversial charging penalty that led to the Lakers overtime game-winner.

"We beat them three-nothing in the third period to tie the game, but we took a foolish penalty at the end of the game," Powers said. "We cross-checked a guy behind the back. There was a lot going on but the only guy that was fingered was our guy."

The Laker's Ben Keup's goal finished the Falcons off.

BG won the season series against LSSU, but all three games were difficult.

"They really came ready to play us," Day said. "We kind of took them lightly and it showed in the third game."

OSU tennis smashes Falcons

By G. MICHAEL GRAHAM
The BG News

They knew they had the talent to win but did not expect this to happen.

After sweeping Illinois-Chicago 7-0 in its first dual match, the Bowling Green men's tennis team traveled to Ohio State with hopes of upsetting the Buckeyes. But Ohio State made sure it came nowhere near that with a 7-0 win Saturday in Columbus.

Ohio State won all six singles matches and two of the three doubles matches to take all seven points. Bowling Green drops to 1-1 on the season.

"We actually played as well in doubles as we have all year," coach Jay Harris said. "I was pleased with how we hit the ball. We lost a bunch of close two-set matches. We didn't win some of the bigger points. A lot of that has to do with match-toughness early in the season."

The Falcons' lone win came at the top singles as Radu Bartan and Matt Wiles defeated the Ohio State duo of Andrew Carlson and Kevin Hawk, 8-4. The win lifts their record to 8-5 on the season.

"We were much better experienced," senior Radu Bartan said of the win. "I was able to think about my game. (In singles) I couldn't come up with the big shots to keep the match close. Matt (Wiles) had a very close match. The other guys told me they were overpowered."

In the singles competition, Wiles almost went three sets with Ohio State's Derek Defalco. After losing the first match 6-4, Wiles forced Defalco into a tiebreaker before losing 7-5.

Falcons stumble at weekend meet

Kent made it a sweep of the Doug Raymond Invitational by winning the men's competition as well as the women's.

BG placed fourth in the competition with 91.5 points. Kent finished with 151.5. Penn State and West Virginia took second and third with 150.5 and 96.5 respectively.

"Kent State and Penn State are traditionally strong teams," men's coach Sterling Martin said. "I think if we would have been really concentrating on beating the competition, we could've beat West Virginia."

The Falcons failed to place first in any event. However, they succeeded in taking second in three separate areas: throwing, sprinting and middle distance running.

"The thing that made me happy was that all groups contributed to our score," Martin said. "We looked well rounded as a team. The sprinters, throwers, jumpers, long distance and middle distance runners all contributed. In the long run it will enable us to score well at the conference meet and give us something to build the team around."

Alex Moser took second in the 35-pound weight throw. Penn State's Carl Wolter outthrew Moser's 53 foot 7 inch throw by heaving the weight 55 feet 2 3/4 inches.

Ricco Oglesby made a mad dash for the finish in the 55-meter sprint. Bobby Cruse of Kent took the event with a time of 6.25 seconds. Oglesby finished less than a quarter second back with a time of 6.42 seconds.

For the middle distance, Pat Miller was runner-up in the 800-meter run with a time of 1:52.06. Tim Gerhardt placed first (1:51.59).

Two field athletes and one hurdler took third place in their respective events.

Mike Baxter placed third in the pole vault while Moser finished a strong day by grabbing third in the shot-put. Baxter cleared a height of 15 feet 5 3/4 inches. Moser launched the shot 53 feet 7 inches.

Alex Sprague could not extend his streak of hurdles victories to three straight meets. But, Sprague placed third at the DRI crossing the finish line in 7.68 seconds.

Other notables for the BG men were: mile run - Kreg Hatfield, 4:17.58, fourth; 55 hurdles - Chaz Price, 7.76 seconds, fifth; high jump - Eric Brown, 6 feet 6 inches, fifth.

Sprague, Aaron Usher and Chad Kunkle went to Findlay on Friday to compete in the JC Penney Invitational. Sprague took second at the meet in the pentathlon with 3,775 points. Usher took third in the 5,000 with a time of 15:18.24.

Sprague, Jimmy Weckesser and Eric Holmes were voted as 1999 men's team captains last week.

Hall of Fame inducts LT despite antics

The Associated Press

MIAMI — In the end, the Lawrence Taylor debate was no debate at all.

The dominant defensive player of his time was voted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, on Saturday, elected in his first year of eligibility.

Joining him in the Class of 1999 were Cleveland Browns tight end Ozzie Newsome, running back Eric Dickerson, and guards Tom Mack and Billy Shaw.

It was Taylor, however, whose candidacy dominated conversation and sparked debate throughout Super Bowl week.

Suspended once while he was playing and arrested twice on drug charges after he retired, he has struggled with off-the-field problems that left some voters uneasy with his candidacy.

Saturday's meeting lasted longer than usual, with the Taylor debate taking the most time. One voter characterized the discussion as non-contentious.

Unlike baseball, there is no "good citizenship" clause in the football hall's bylaws and when it was time to vote, he received the 80 percent necessary for election. With all 36 voters present, 29 were needed. There was no announcement on the final vote.

Taylor, filming an Oliver Stone movie in South Florida, issued a statement saying:

"I am humbled by being elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame. As I have said, I feel like it is the ultimate reward for playing the game that I love so much and gave so much. I appreciate the debate and the consideration that was given to my nomination. Ultimately, this honor has to do with how I played the game. Obviously, the majority of the committee felt the same way."

"It doesn't always come across, but I do appreciate the well wishes and concerns of my family, my friends, and my former teammates. It means a great deal to me; it truly does."

Taylor played 13 seasons at linebacker for the New York Giants. He was a three-time choice as Defensive Player of the Year, the NFL's most valuable player in 1986 and was selected for a record 10 consecutive Pro Bowls. He finished his career with 132.5 sacks, not including 9.5 recorded in 1981 before sacks became an official statistic.

Dickerson set a single-season rushing record of 2,105 yards in 1984 and wound up third on the career rushing list with 13,259.

Like Taylor, Dickerson was somewhat controversial, forcing a trade from the Los Angeles Rams to Indianapolis Colts in 1987 following a long holdout.

"In life, everything doesn't go like you planned," he said. "For me, there were ups and downs, but I know I was a good football player. I never said I was a great football player."

Dickerson said he thought his records would fall one day.

"Every year, it seems someone gets closer and closer," he said. "If someone breaks my records, I'll be happy for him."

Mack was an 11-time Pro Bowl choice when he played for the Rams and one of the best blocking guards of his generation. He played in 184 consecutive games, never missing one in his 13-year career, and was elected in his final year of eligibility.

Newsome, tops all tight ends in receptions with 662 catches for 7,980 yards and 47 touchdowns in 13 seasons with the Cleveland Browns. He had back-to-back 89-catch seasons in 1983 and 1984 and played in 197 consecutive games before moving into the team's front office.

He goes into the hall the same year that Cleveland, the only team he played for, returns to the NFL.

"Getting the opportunity to go in when the Browns are going back on the football field is a double whammy," he said. "It makes it more special for myself. I'm a Cleveland Brown. I wore that orange helmet."

Shaw, a guard, played nine seasons with the Buffalo Bills and made pro football's All-Decade team of the '60s and the all-time AFL team.

"He was everything you look for in an offensive lineman — competitive, strong and tough," said team owner Ralph Wilson. "He was a great leader. Billy played an integral role in our 1964 and '65 championship teams and he deserves the honor that only the Hall of Fame can bestow upon a player."

Two other finalists — wide receiver Lynn Swann and defensive lineman Howie Long — failed to win election.

Eight other candidates were eliminated in earlier voting: coaches George Allen and Marv Levy, Pittsburgh Steelers owner Dan Rooney, defensive end Carl Eller, punter Ray Guy, wide receiver John Stallworth, tackle Ron Yary and defensive end Jack Youngblood.

Kansas exits poll

The Associated Press

Connecticut's run as the No. 1 team in The Associated Press college basketball poll reached 10 weeks Monday, while Kansas was not in the Top 25 for the first time in eight years.

The Huskies (19-0), the nation's only unbeaten Division I team, were again the runaway choice, receiving 52 first-place votes and 1,720 points.

The rest of the Top 25 received a shakeup, with Kansas, which had been ranked for every poll since Jan. 29, 1991, dropping out along with Texas Christian and Miami.

The three newcomers were No. 20 Utah, which was ranked 10th in the preseason poll and the second time in school history; and No. 24 Missouri, which is back in the Top 25 after a 3 1/2-year absence.

Cincinnati moved up two spots to No. 3, while Stanford, which lost at Arizona on Thursday, dropped one place to fourth. Kentucky and Auburn each moved up one place to fifth and sixth, while Maryland, which lost by 13 points at Wake Forest, dropped from fourth to seventh.

Michigan State and St. John's held on to Nos. 8 and 9, while Arizona moved back into the top 10 after the win over Stanford.

Wisconsin was at No. 11 and followed by North Carolina, UCLA, Iowa, Ohio State, Syracuse, New Mexico, Purdue and Minnesota, which were tied for 18th, and Utah.

The last five ranked teams were Indiana, Arkansas, College of Charleston, Missouri and Miami.

Kansas (14-6) had lost three of four before beating Colorado at home on Saturday. The Jayhawks' run of 145 consecutive poll appearances was the third longest current streak behind the 156 of North Carolina and 154 of Kentucky.

"That's a long time. I'm proud of that," Kansas coach Roy Williams said. "But I truly don't think it will affect this team. I really don't. We play dumb on the court sometimes. But they're not dumb kids. And they realize that doesn't have anything to do with the way we play."

"It's not going to affect me whatsoever and I'd be shocked if they let it affect them."

HARTFORD, Conn. — Two injured starters and one of the worst offensive performances in almost two decades meant the end of top-ranked Connecticut's unbeaten season.

Freshman Damone Brown scored all 14 of his points in the second half and No. 16 Syracuse beat the Huskies 59-42 Monday night as Connecticut played without leading scorer Richard Hamilton and leading rebounder Jake Voskuhl.

The Huskies (19-1, 11-1 Big East) had their 16-game confer-

Syracuse (16-6, 7-5) won for the fourth time in five games by shooting 43 percent (23-for-54) and outrebounding the Huskies 37-26.

Raterman earns league honor

Bowling Green's Jackie Raterman has earned Mid-American Conference offensive co-player of the week. This is the second time this year she has garnered this honor and the third time of Raterman's career. Raterman shares this honor with Kent's Julie Studer.

Raterman has averaged 27.5 points and 13 boards a game during the Falcon's two victories last week. Raterman also shot .657 from the field (23-35) during the week. Raterman's hot shooting has led BG to four consecutive victories in the MAC.

Miami, Ohio wins

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — Wally Szczerbiak scored 23 points, including 16 consecutive points in the second half, to lead Miami to a 63-57 victory over Toledo in the Mid-American Conference on Monday.

Toledo (16-4, 8-4 MAC) grabbed the lead only once in the game, pulling ahead of Miami (15-4, 10-1) by one point at 43-42 with 9:15 left in the game.

A jumper by Szczerbiak pushed Miami back into the lead, and the RedHawks kept control of the game the rest of the way. Szczerbiak went on to score 11 straight points over the next three minutes. He scored a total of 17 points in the second half.

Robinson could drop charges

The Associated Press

MIAMI — Atlanta Falcons safety Eugene Robinson, arrested for soliciting an undercover police officer for sex the night before the Super Bowl, could have charges dropped through a diversion program.

"We will proceed against him like almost all people in his situation who get arrested for solicitation," Don Ungurait, a spokesman for the State Attorney's office in Miami-Dade County, said Monday.

"If there are no priors, it is certainly in the realm of probability that he will get an opportunity to go to a diversion program. ... If he was offered that type of program and he completed it, then the charges would be dropped against him."

Robinson, 35, got nabbed with about 25 others in a police sting targeting solicitation on Biscayne Boulevard, a major street in Miami frequented by prostitutes.

He was driving alone in a rented car when he allegedly offered an undercover officer $40 for oral sex.

"I really believe and strongly believe I will be found innocent in this deal," Robinson said after the Falcons' 34-19 loss to the Denver Broncos in the Super Bowl on Sunday night.

Robinson will probably be arraigned within the next 30 days. If he is not offered pre-trial intervention, the player could face a maximum penalty of about 60 days if convicted, Ungurait said.

The arrest occurred about 12 hours after a Christian athletes group selected him the winner of an award for high moral character. His wife and children were in Miami at a nearby hotel for the Super Bowl.

"I talked to one of the arresting officers and he said that Eugene was an extremely nice guy," said Miami police spokesman Delrish Moss.

Germaine selected Buckeyes' MVP

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Quarterback Joe Germaine has been chosen by his teammates as the Buckeyes' Most Valuable Player for 1998.

Germaine, a senior, also was honored as the team's top offensive player at the team's banquet Monday night.

This season, he set 11 team records, including single-season marks for yards passing (3,330), yards passing per game (277.5), career records for completion (59.2 percent) and per-game passing yardage (172.1). He also was chosen as the Big Ten Conference's MVP.

Antoine Winfield was chosen as the team's top defensive player and best defensive back.

Winfield, an Associated Press first-team All-American, earlier had won the first Thorpe Award as the nation's best defensive back. He had 75 tackles and 15 pass breakups this season and is the first non-linebacker at OSU with more than 200 career tackles.

David Boston was picked as the team's outstanding receiver and best player in the Ohio State-Michigan game. He set 11 Buckeye pass catching records this season, including career marks for receptions (191), yards (2,855) and touchdowns (34).

Linebacker Jerry Rudzinski was selected as the top scholar-athlete and most inspirational player on the team.

BG remains perfect in MAC

By MATTHEW P. LYONS

The BG News

In front of a crowd of 500 the falcon gymnastics team played the role of the "Dirty Bird" on Saturday as they downed the Kent by the score of 189.825 to 188.725.

The Golden Flashes and the Falcons started the day off on a low note as each team lost a member to injury during the warm-up period. BG senior Christina Treiber suffered an ankle injury while landing off the uneven bars.

Despite a slow start by Kent on uneven bars the Golden Flashes rebounded to better their score from the previous week. The Golden Flashes were led by Kristy High and Kelly Dezman.

The Falcons rebounded from last weeks season low vault performance with a 48.15. Leading the way for BG were freshmen Marny Oestreg, Mindy Untch, and Cristin McClellan. Senior co-captain Jackie Haft also had a strong showing on vault and floor.

Saturday's win halted Kent's nine-game win streak and kept the Falcons a perfect 3-0 in the Mid-American Conference.

"If a 189.825 is a bad meet for us, then we're a darn good team," BG coach Dan Connelly said. "It was just kind of a rough performance in some places. Our depth is our saving grace, and we owe that to some walk-ons."

The Falcons, (3-2, 3-0 MAC), take a break from conference action Saturday for a meet at Denver.

Loss tough for Reeves

The Associated Press

MIAMI — As the last few seconds ticked off the clock, Dan Reeves folded his arms across his chest. It was not to stop the hurt in his heart, but to remind himself that it was still beating.

It may be weeks before he gets over Denver 34, Atlanta 19. It may be even longer before he gets over being on the wrong side of the Super Bowl in his fourth try as a coach.

But the important thing, Reeves kept assuring everyone who wanted to console him, was that there would be another chance.

"Somebody has to be the loser," he said. "If you can walk off and feel like you've given it everything you have and you come out the loser, congratulate the winner and move on. I have no problem with that."

Six weeks ago, Reeves, 55, was laid out on an operating-room table with a failing heart. He underwent quadruple-bypass surgery. He was back on the sideline almost before anyone noticed he was gone.

His rushing back to work was easy enough to explain.

Reeves put in 12 seasons in Denver, Broncos owner Pat Bowlen had to decide whether to keep his star player or his coach. Reeves finished a distant second. Sunday was his shot at a pay-back.

Reeves stacked eight defenders at the line of scrimmage to make sure running back Terrell Davis didn't beat him. Then he dared John Elway to try, to prove at age 38, that he still had one great game left.

Reeves conceded it didn't sound like much of a plan. "You get here and well," he mused afterward, "who knows what your chances are?"

It came out as a question, even though Reeves probably knew the answer going in. His chances were not good when he brought the Falcons to Miami last week. But they took a turn for the worse — much worse — on Saturday night.

Safety Eugene Robinson, a veteran who was supposed to exert the kind of leadership and steadying influence that Reeves is all about, was arrested on a downtown street and charged with solicitation. Over and over, Reeves was asked how it affected his team. Over and over, he kept defending Robinson.

The next time the question came up, Reeves smacked the table on the podium in front of him.

"This is the last time I'm going to answer that one," he said finally.

No wonder. Reeves talked to the team at length late Saturday night, then again before they took the field.

"Coach told us that if we lost this game, it would be the ultimate loss," linebacker Jesse Tugle said. "We worked so hard to get to this point. We just didn't respond."

There was a moment in the second quarter when it was still possible, when Denver's lead was just 10-3. Then, Falcons kicker Morten Andersen missed a 26-yard field goal and Elway brought the Broncos to the line of scrimmage and saw eight Atlanta defenders still hanging in stubbornly to stop the run, still close enough to read his lips.

He called play-action, rolled to his right and waited for Rod Smith to slip past the cornerback and into single coverage against Robinson. Then he let fly. Eighty yards later, Smith rolled into the end zone and over the Falcons' chances of winning their first Super Bowl.
